Self-Assessment of Internal Controls

Introduction

The UNC Charlotte Guide for Self-Assessment of Internal Controls is a tool adapted from the annual requirement administered to all state agencies by the Office of the State Controller (OSC). The purpose of the OSC annual assessment is to assist in confirming the presence of a sound system of internal controls. This guide provides a streamlined set of questions intended to provide a vice chancellor, dean, associate dean, department chair, or department/center/agency/activity director with a self assessment tool that will guide him or her along the path of compliance with the many local, state and federal requirements to which we must adhere.

The guide is intended to be a companion tool to the Department Review Guide Self Assessment Version. You should complete the Internal Controls self assessment first to identify those operational areas into which you need to look more closely. Some of the questions do not apply to every unit on campus. If this is the case for you, then answer “N/A” (not applicable). For those questions for which you are not sure of an answer or don’t know the answer, write “D/K” (don’t know). After completing this guide, refer to the Department Review Guide and conduct a more in-depth assessment of your internal operations in those areas marked “No” or “D/K.”

The Department Review Guide asks a series of specific questions whose answers will complete a picture of how your unit performs in each area against the stated objective for that function. At the end of each section are the same two questions: “What did you find?” followed by “Did you meet the stated objective?” For those areas where you do not feel you meet the stated objective, use the Specific Subject Matter Reference Listing to seek guidance and advice on how to correct the issues that you have developed.

The Internal Audit Department recommends that you complete these two assessments within the first six months of your assignment to a management position and periodically thereafter. The tools can also be used as a “desk reference” by administrative staff and as orientation tools for New Employees. Any questions concerning the construction or content of either review guide should be addressed to the Internal Audit Department.

Internal Control Overview

The following section regarding internal control is taken from the Report of the Committee of Sponsoring Organizations of the Treadway Commission (COSO) and the related Internal Control Concepts, Standards, and Applications.

Internal control is broadly defined as a process, established by an entity’s board of directors, management and other personnel, designed to provide reasonable assurance regarding the achievement of objectives in the following categories:
- Effectiveness and efficiency of operations;
- Reliability of financial reporting; and
- Compliance with applicable laws and regulations.

For a control to be effective, actual results must be compared to expected results or standards, and corrective action must be taken when indicated. An effective system of internal control should have the following characteristics:

- Establishment of standards;
- Measurement of actual performance;
- Analysis and comparison of actual results to standards;
- Implementation of a program of corrective actions; and
- Review and revision of the standards.

Controls should be economical in time as well as money, and should measure performance in areas that are relevant to the planned result. Controls should also be timely and easily understood by the people using them. Good controls will reflect the goals of the department, indicate when the goals are not being achieved, and measure the critical items - those that have the most impact on achieving goals. The risk of failure and the potential effect must be considered along with the cost of establishing the control. Excessive control is costly and counterproductive. Too little control presents undue risk. There should be a conscious effort made to strike an appropriate balance.

Elements of Internal Control

Internal control consists of five interrelated components:

1. The Control Environment

The control environment, as established by the organization’s administration, sets the tone of an institution and influences the control consciousness of its people. Likewise, leaders of each department, area or activity establish a local control environment. This is the foundation for all other components of internal control, providing discipline and structure. Control environment factors include:

- Integrity and ethical values;
- The competence of the organization’s people;
- Leadership philosophy and style; and
- Assignment of authority and responsibility.
2. Risk Assessment

Every organization faces a variety of risks from external and internal sources that must be assessed. A requirement of risk assessment is establishment of objectives, linked at different levels and internally consistent. Risk assessment is the identification and analysis of relevant risks to achievement of the objectives. This forms the basis for determining how the risks should be managed. Because economic, regulatory, and operating conditions will continue to change, mechanisms are needed to identify and deal with the special risks associated with change.

3. Control Activities

Control activities are the policies and procedures that help ensure that management directives are carried out. They help ensure that necessary actions are taken to address risks to achievement of the organization’s objectives. Control activities occur throughout the organization, at all levels and in all functions. They include a range of activities as diverse as approvals, authorizations, verifications, reconciliations, reviews of operating performance, security of assets and segregation of duties.

4. Information and Communication

Pertinent information must be identified, captured and communicated to appropriate personnel on a timely basis. Information systems produce reports containing operational, financial, and compliance-related information. They deal not only with internally generated data, but also information concerning external events, activities, and conditions.

5. Monitoring

Internal control systems must be monitored by a process that assesses the quality of the system’s performance over time. This is accomplished through ongoing activities and separate evaluations. Ongoing monitoring occurs in the course of operations. It includes regular management and supervisory activities, and other actions personnel take in performing their duties. The scope and frequency of separate evaluations depend primarily on an assessment of risks and the effectiveness of ongoing monitoring procedures. Internal control deficiencies should be reported to higher levels of management, with serious matters reported immediately to administration. The ultimate responsibility for a strong system of internal control rests with management. The internal control questions provided here should be used as a tool in assessing this system.
Public Record advisory

The Office of Legal Affairs has reviewed this document and recommended that all who complete this self assessment, either in writing or by electronic means, be cognizant of the Public Record provisions of Chapter 132 of the NC General Statutes. A completed copy may constitute a Public Record releasable to the general public upon proper request. This should not discourage anyone from using or completing the self assessment, since its intent is to display a willingness to assess our operations against established standards and to determine where improvements need to be made. Users are encouraged to consult the Office of Legal Affairs if queried by external parties on its contents.
Bolded questions identify critical controls. A critical control is a control that will prevent or detect an error in the event that all other controls fail.
